Indosuez Wealth Management finalises the acquisition of Banque Thaler

Indosuez Wealth Management, the wealth management arm of the Crédit Agricole Group, has announced that its Swiss entity has finalised the acquisition of Banque Thaler, of which it now holds 100% of the capital.

The acquisition, initially announced on 4th April 2025, has received approval from the relevant regulatory authorities. This transaction is fully aligned with Indosuez Wealth Management's growth strategy, strengthening its position in the Swiss market, where the bank has been present since 1876. The legal merger of the two entities is expected to take place by the end of 2025.

Clients of Banque Thaler will benefit from an expanded range of products and expertise, the Group's stability, its international network, as well as capabilities in wealth advisory and structuring, financing, corporate finance, fund servicing, and asset management.

Jacques Prost, Chief Executive Officer of Indosuez Wealth Management, stated: "With Banque Thaler, we are strengthening our position in a key market and reaffirming our role as a major player in wealth management in Europe. This acquisition is part of our strategy: to remain close to our clients through agile local teams and one of the most comprehensive service offerings on the market, accessible wherever they are."

Marc-André Poirier, Chief Executive Officer of Indosuez in Switzerland, added: "This partnership marks an important milestone for the bank, paving the way for a new dynamic of growth and opportunities in Switzerland."

The impact on Crédit Agricole S.A.'s CET1 ratio will be limited.
